Gibson Is Negro Big League Hope

If anything comes of the present agitation to erase the color line in big league ball, there may be another Babe Ruth soon in the big show. Already they are endearingly referring to Josh Gibson, catcher for the Homestead Grays, as the Brown Bambino. Gibson is one of the four Negro players who have been recommended for a trial with the Pirates. The others are Willie Wells, Sammy Bankhead and Leon Day.

Gibson will be squatting under the bat at Ebbets Field on Sunday when the Grays tangle with the Newark Eagles in a double-header, along with Wells, Bankhead and Day.

Outside of hitting wholesale home runs Gibson has only one thing in common with Ruth—the Babe began his baseball career at St. Mary's School in Baltimore as a catcher. The Babe was a south-paw swinger, while Gibson is an orthodox righthander at bat.
